	SITES
FACTORS and REASONS
Urban development would not contribute to a compact urban form.
Distances to existing community facilities and the downtown are too great and auto trips would be encouraged.
Conversion of prime agricultural land should be avoided here.
Urban development would significantly and adversely affect the scenic resources of the community.
Location would involve excessive new infrastructure or excessive extensions of existing infrastructure.
Urban development here would not be conducive to transit or bicycle mobility.
