DILLON HORTON

Age: 27

Occupation: Community Development Specialist

Friends & neighbors, I'm a longtime community activist running for Davis City Council because I believe we need leaders who live closer to the crises facing many Davisites.

I grew up as an only child in Los Angeles where my mother was a nurse. My mom, a Texan Army veteran, raised me on her own. It was from her that I learned the values of public service and civic engagement. When I came to Davis as a Political Science student, I organized against tuition increases and to expand affordable student housing.

In 2016 I returned to Los Angeles because my mother was diagnosed with cancer and needed help during treatment. The disease progressed quickly, and just a few days after my 23rd birthday my mother passed away. As I went through the most difficult period of my life, I was struck by the unsolicited compassion of Davis residents who embraced me as a part of this community. I made Davis my home, and I want to do everything I can to repay the kindness extended to me by this amazing community.

In this unprecedented moment in history, cast your vote for new leadership.
